

The Fae

It was normal for me to stumble upon Fae. Nowadays the Fae didn't care that humans could sense their magic. The Fae even ordered people to kill themselves as a joke.

The Fae lived for around a millennium, and they thought they had the power to rule the world. They never understood that it was not only them to enjoy life, but that other people had a life too. That was why I, Celaena, had joined the Fae hunters: to keep Fae in line and to never let the Fae war ever happen again.

When morning came, I woke up and groaned, realizing I had to work for 24 hours today on a stakeout. But I wouldn't complain, not after the big mistake that I made last week. The boss was really angry about it. I couldn't control my anger, no matter who it was. Even if all he did was tell me that I was a blood sucking vampire, I would have killed him. I was interrupted from my thoughts by a brisk knock on my dorm door. I yelled a quick come in while I walked to the door. I was surprised by the face that I saw poke out from behind the door. Ean ignored my surprised face and went over to my bed and sat there and waited for me to join him. "What do you need Ean?" I asked. His face just made that innocent face like he wasn't about to ask for money or that other stuff. "Why would you think I came here to get something? Can't a guy see his best friend to wish her luck in not killing anyone in the next 24 hours?". I slapped him playfully on the arm and told him that he would be the one who would get killed, if he didn't get out of my room while I got ready for work. He rushed out, saying "Don't kill me, your highness! Kill your food instead!!!". I laughed and closed the door, grabbing my laptop and heading for the conference room for the stakeout information.

When I got to the conference room, I realized that there were a lot of people involved. I walked around them, trying to grab a package on the desk with all the tasks for everyone. When I finally got the package, I didn't see my name on the direct contact list. I thought this was really strange, because the person we were staking out on had close ties with my family. And he completely trusted me too. I went to the chief and asked "Sir, why is my name not in the direct contact list?". The chief looked at me and answered coldly: "You will not be in this stake out anymore for a risk of the subject finding out you are part of the Fae Hunters." I stared at him in shock as I yelled the word "WHAT?!" The moment I said this everyone hushed, and the chief hissed "Get out!". I stormed out, furious that I wasn't part of the stakeout. But I could still hang out with the targeted subject, Brian. After all, no one has ever said that it was not allowed.....

So I went back home and got ready to go out with Brian. When I opened the door to go out, Brian was already right there and about to knock on my door. It was a surprise since we were supposed to meet at the entrance of the concert to avoid any suspicions by the Fae Hunters. Brian was a nice Fae. He always had the right words to say. A very civilized Fae. It was as if his words are full of music. Maybe it was why he was that exceptionally charming and handsome. We had a great night that day and I fell in love with Brian. Unfortunately it ended badly because Brian cheated on me with the Queen of the Fae. Maybe....Maybe.... Maybe it was also fate that no human and Fae can ever have a happily ever after together.

During my darkest period of heart breaking, "He" was always there for me. "He" was the one supporting me without ever asking anything in return. I also quit the Fae hunters, finally realising the job wasn't for me. I ended up dating and marrying "He", Ean. We had 3 kids! We lived happily ever after, and hopefully everyone else in this strange but beautiful world will too.....
