

The Bullying Blowfish

It was a bright and sunny day. Molly was at the beach with her friends. They were playing volleyball but all they were talking about was this afternoon. At 2:30 Molly was going to the bottom of the ocean to discover some sea creatures. It was time to go in 3 hours so she hung out with her friends until she had to go. Then 2:30 came around and she had to go. She went to her house and got her scuba gear on. Molly was a famous scuba diver and this was her chance to discover something new!

She was ready to show the crowd what she came for. Once she was done saying goodbye to her friends and parents she got onto her motor boat and sped away. When she got to the spot she wanted, she anchored her boat and got her air tank and goggles and put them on; she was all ready to jump in the water. SPLASH INTO THE WATER SHE WENT. Luckily she had her underwater camera with her, so Molly could take all the amazing pictures she needed. Onto the adventure she went. " I think I'm just going to swim around to look at things for a little bit," said Molly. Then off she went exploring in the ocean... But then she heard a call of help. It sounded like it was coming from a whale so she raced over to see what was going on. Then she looked and she saw the whale. It was what she thought it would be; a little whale, so she went to help him. She searched everywhere but he must have moved. Unfortunately she could still hear him but couldn't see him so she kept looking. She saw movement, it looked smaller than a whale. Molly saw it swim to some smaller fish and she looked at it closely and figured out it was a blowfish. When the blowfish got closer to the small fish he blew himself up and scared all the little fish away so Molly swam away and hid behind some seaweed then she heard another call of help! She swam some more and then saw that blowfish, this time it wasn't scaring little fish, it was scaring a baby whale. Molly had to put a stop to this blowfish. Then Molly swam up to the blowfish and scared it away. "Are you ok?" said Molly. Thankfully Molly had a whale translator so she could understand what the whale was saying. The whale said "I'm ok, my name is Ernie what's your name?" "My name is Molly and I'm a scuba diver. What was that blowfish trying to do to you?" "He was trying to scare me. His name is Billy the blowfish but what everyone calls him is the bullying blowfish." "Why do they call him that?" Molly asked. "They call him that because he bullies everyone he sees and scares them," said Ernie. "We have to put a stop to this. Let's go find that blowfish" said Molly. They searched through the ocean trying to find that mean blowfish. Finally they saw him hiding behind the rock about to scare some jellyfish, but then he saw Ernie and Molly so he swam away. "No we lost him again," said Molly. Molly and Ernie kept on looking because they really really needed to find him. That blowfish was getting into more and more trouble with his scaring. "Oh there he is," said Molly. "He's trying to scare the spider crabs. We've got to catch him this time," said Ernie. They snuck up behind him and got him. "Why are you scaring everyone?" said Molly. "I think it's funny," said Billy the blowfish. "Yea but the creatures in the sea aren't really liking it. Do you think you could stop scaring them? It really frightens them and it's pretty annoying to be scared every few minutes. Do you think you could stop?" said Molly. Well I guess since nobody is really liking it, I could stop. There are other things I could do in the sea, like playing with the other creatures. Maybe they'll like it if I stop scaring them.

What do you think?" asked Billy. "Yes," said Molly. So that day Billy the Blowfish learned his lesson of no more scaring other creatures. So Molly said goodbye and swam back up to the beach to play with friends. They lived happily ever after.
